Please read our T&C Enzymatic Biodiesel Production from Waste Cooking Oil Using Microbial Strain Fusarium oxysporum. Biodiesel production from waste cooking oil was performed in a continuous process using Fusarium oxysporum, which utilizes waste cooking oil as its carbon source to produce fatty acid ester. An oil/fatty acid mixture was obtained by shaking the flasks with 5% inoculum of strain F. oxysporum in a 2-L flask (V/V) for 10 days at 30 °C and 150 rpm. After the fermentation reaction, glycerol was separated from the reaction medium by a multi-effect evaporator and total fatty acid was obtained by drying the fermentation broth. Fatty acid methyl esters (FAMES) were prepared by transesterification of total fatty acid. The FAMES were analyzed by gas chromatography (GC) and gas chromatography-mass spectroscopy (GC-MS), and then biodiesel yield was calculated by mole percentage of FAMES. This study revealed that F. oxysporum can produce FAMES efficiently and the biodiesel yield from waste cooking oil reached 68.3% by glycerol recovery rate.

Q: Does SDL Tridion have a concept of "minimal" pages? In the standard SDL Tridion implementation, you can define a navigation structure. For example, you can provide a top navigation (generated from a set of component templates), then link to one of the channel pages, and then have the navigation repeat for each of the other channel pages. So, if you have a Components page with 20 components on it, you will get a navigation similar to the following: [This is a component] [Link to Component] ... [Link to Component] However, SDL Tridion allows the navigation to be defined at multiple levels. For example, you could define a "Structure" component that would serve up a navigation bar at the top of the page. If this component is defined in an
